ACCURATE HOME CARE ACQUIRES NEW FACILITY FOR TRAINING NURSES AND FIELD STAFF
The space demonstrates Accurate's commitment to education, supports quality patient care

ELK RIVER, MINN. (May 14, 2010) – During National Nurses Week, Accurate Home Care is pleased to announce the acquisition of a new facility in Elk River separate from their headquarters which will be used as a training facility for nurses and field staff. The facility will support the extensive educational curriculum that Accurate already has, including hands-on and online course work and testing for all employees.

“Our commitment to education and the comprehensive curriculum that we offer has been highlighted by our nurses and staff as something that attracts them to Accurate,” said Peter A. Davis, chief executive officer of Accurate Home Care. “This facility will not only establish a new space for growth, but it will also be solely dedicated to this important part of our business which makes us stand out from other home care companies.”

A well-educated staff is extremely important to delivering quality care, particularly for a company such as Accurate. “Our nurses and staff care for clients whose needs vary and often include critical and complex medical needs,” said Davis. Nurses and staff employed by Accurate have extensive ventilator, tracheostomy, infusion therapy and gastrostomy tube training; they also receive curriculum on infection control, oxygen safety, home care equipment and administering medications in the home.

“We strongly believe ongoing education contributes to the quality of the care we provide,” said Amy Nelson, founder and president of Accurate Home Care. “Thus, we make it a priority to provide those opportunities for our employees.”

In addition to the announcement of the new training facility, Accurate has announced Suz Heinecke, RN as the new Education Director. Heinecke started with Accurate as a nurse working with clients with complex medical needs, and then became a care manager overseeing a range of client and family situations to coordinate care in the home. She brings a range of experience to her duties to train client care teams. “An investment in a new facility demonstrates Accurate’s philosophy about the important role that education plays in the quality of care patients receive,” said Heinecke. “I am excited to start utilizing the new space, and to be a part of an organization that so pointedly makes education a priority.”

The new training center will occupy about 900 square feet and will be designed to enable technical support for the ever growing curriculum available to Accurate nurses and PCA’s. There will be computers, a library of technical resources and also a lounge area. The space is anticipated to be ready to use on June 15.
